Narrow vote increases water rates 3.5 percent

City commissioners not in agreement, increase passes 3-2

Spencer Magnet Editor

Taylorsville City Commission voted Thursday night to include a water rate increase of 3.5 percent for all of its water customers in its proposed budget for the next fiscal year, which begins

The 3.5 percent increase passed by a vote of 3-2, with Mayor Don Pay and commissioners Kathy Spears and Larry Waldridge in favor, and commissioners Beverly Ingram and Nathan Nation opposed.

The last matter on the agenda for Thursday's special meeting was a budget workshop, which primarily consisted of discussion of how to manage the 6.4 percent rate increase the city is facing from Louisville Water, which provides water to the city, as well as ways to offset a projected loss in the sewer depart-

Teacher saves choking student's life with Heimlich maneuver

PHYLLIS McGLAUGLIN for The Spencer Magnet

Spencer Elementary teacher Vicki Thomas saved Bryce Cooper's life when she performed the Heimlich maneuver on him after he choked on a peppermint.

by PHYLLIS McLAUGHLIN Special to The Spencer Magnet

Most people who take training to handle emergency medical situations never have to put their knowledge to the test. During all the 20 years of her career, this was true for Vicki Thomas, a third-grade teacher at Spencer County Elementary School.

But on Tuesday, April 30, her training in using the Heimlich maneuver literally saved the life of one of her students, Bryce Cooper.

The two discussed the ordeal during an interview at the school yesterday.

Thomas said the incident occurred at the end of the school day, while her students were sitting on the carpet in her classroom waiting to be dismissed to their buses.

"I was talking with my friend," said 8-year-old Bryce. He said his friend gave him the mint, and after he popped it in his mouth, "my tongue hit it and bumped it back" into his throat.

The mint became lodged and, suddenly, Bryce couldn't breathe.

Thomas said she was erasing her board when she felt Bryce tugging at her arm. He pointed at his throat.

"He was panicked and already see HAPPY, page A-7

County budget proposal includes plans for new EMS facility

by MALLORY BILGER Magnet Staff Writer

In a preliminary budget discussion with Spencer County Fiscal Court members Monday morning, Judge Executive Bill Karrer said he was interested in cutting the county's personal property tax rates and that he had to turn down some department expenditure requests because of the looming cost of a new EMS facility.

The court had its first reading of the $6,081,964 budget, which will go into affect in the new fiscal year starting July 1. Karrer's presentation showed magistrates his proposed figures in the budget and highlighted some areas of change, including a new $225,000 line item labeled EMS capital project — headquarters. The money has been earmarked to replace the depart-

Local singer, songwriter performing at Renfro Valley

Local singer-songwriter Megan Stout is now able to add Renfro Valley entertainer to her list of achievements. Renfro Valley, known as Kentucky's Country Music Capital is one of real country music's most treasured venues. Located just off I-75S exit 62 in Rockcastle County, it offers several different music shows Wednesday through Saturday and headliner concert series with national acts. Renfro Valley's Historic Barn Dance show is the second longest running dance show in the world. Second only to the Grand Ole Opry Show. Stout was among 140 singers and musicians who auditioned in February. She was called back as part of the top 25 to audition again. Then, Stout was selected as one of the 10 picked to join the Renfro Valley cast. Starting this month, Megan will perform there every Thursday night in the Malt Shop Memories Show, a '50s themed musical, and every other Friday and Saturday night in the Tribute to the Legends and Historic Barn Dance Show. For more information on Renfro Valley shows go to RenfroValley.com or call 1-800-765-SING. For more information about Stout, visit her website, Megan-StoutMusic.com.

Osteoporosis Affects Men as Well

Osteoporosis is a reduction in bone mass, accompanied by an increased risk of fractures. As age increases, bone loss increases, particularly later in life. Normally, cells called osteoclasts work to resorb older bone and osteoblasts work to build new replacement bone. However, in osteoporosis, bone loss occurs as a result of an imbalance in this process. Certain types of medications, such as glucocorticoids and anticonvulsant medications, may increase bone loss. Smoking cigarettes, excessive alcohol intake, and low amounts of physical activity can also lead to bone loss.

Men with osteoporosis are encouraged to avoid cigarette smoking and excessive alcohol intake. In addition, a program of regular weightbearing exercise is recommended. Calcium and vitamin D supplements should be taken daily. Men aged 50 years or older who have experienced a fracture in the past and have a low bone mineral density (BMD) score may be prescribed medications for osteoporosis, such as bisphosphonate medications. Alendronate (Fosamax) and risedronate (Actonel) are bisphosphonates that may be prescribed for men as well as women with osteoporosis. These medications work to prevent and decrease bone resorption, which leads to an increase in bone density.

Middle, high school drama students to perform 'The Hobbit'

by DEANNA GODMAN

Magnet Freelancer

Magic descends on Taylorsville this week as the Spencer County middle and high school drama students perform their production of "The Hobbit."

The show opens on Thursday, May 10 at 7pm in the middle school theater. The cost is $2 for students and $4 for adults. Other performances are on May 11 and 12 at 7pm and Sunday, May 13 at 2pm.

Auditions for the play were in February. Twenty-eight actors and twenty-three crew members have worked hard to get the play ready. Approximately 70% of the students involved are from the middle school.

"Students are involved in literally everything: costumes, sound, design, sound effects, scenery, props, lighting," said Shelby Steege, middle school drama teacher. "We have even gotten to the point where high school students direct."

When choosing costumes for plays, the students discuss what the characters should look like, and then review the costumes they already have from previous performances. They adapt what they can and buy or rent others. The Gandalf costume was newly designed this year. Amanda Bruce is the adult volunteer in charge of costuming. Philip Bruce volunteers to work on the sets.

Many of the students involved have participated in plays at the school previously, but anyone is encouraged to try-out. One of the actors in "The Hobbit" is in his first play as a sophomore. If a student is interested in being on the crew, there is also an application process for that.

According to Steege, students approach her with the desire to direct. As more students express interest in directing, she will implement an application process for that role also.

are the student directors for this performance, and it was their decision to put on "The Hobbit."

"Once they told me they went

"Once they told me they wanted to do "The Hobbit," I started looking for scripts," said Steege. She ordered several and then let the directors choose the adaptation they preferred. "They did write a few scenes they felt were missing."

"I've acted in every single show since I got into middle school, so it's something I've wanted to try for a while," said Vest of his decision to direct. "I'm really big into the theater program."

Bruce has been involved in the theater for 4 years. He enjoyed directing because he was able to be involved in the play through the entire process and see it all come together.

"I'm a huge Lord of the Rings fan," said Bruce, adding he thought it would be fun to do "The Hobbit".

"I was also inspired by the movie coming out."

Vest's reasons were similar.

"I fell in love with The Lord of the Rings and The Hobbit in 7th grade, about the same time as I fell in love with theater," said Vest. "I just wanted to see how it would develop on stage and it's developed very well."

The lead actors this year are Tevis DeZern, sophomore, as Bilbo Baggins, John Mathre, junior, as Gandalf, and Matthew Seeforth, 8th grader, as Thorin.

"I love the process of creation and bringing something to life," said Vest. "It moves me and soothes the soul."

No fiddling with cell phones during government meetings

hile covering the Spencer County Fiscal Court Monday, I noticed something disturbing. A couple of magistrates intermittently appeared to be typing on their cell phones during the course of the

Now in this day of constant information flow via text messages, Facebook and Twitter, and the unwillingness to separate from one's cell phone at all, this may not seem like a big deal.

But this was taking place during a public meeting — in which all communication involving public business is supposed to be available to the audi-

I would like to note that a few of the court's senior members did not access their cell phones, and that was comforting. But I was amazed that this practice was accepted at all. As a reporter, I am a stickler for transparency. Were the magistrates messaging their sick children, a friend or checking emails? Or, were they communicating, secretly, with each other about matters that pertain to public court business?

I guess we will never know what they were doing on their private cell phones. I talked with Judge Executive Bill Karrer about this following the meeting and he said he had not really noticed the practice all that much. He said no one else has brought this to him as a concern, but I see it as potential major issue.

I would encourage the court to adopt a policy that cell phones and other handheld electronic devices be used only for emergencies or for the express purpose of looking up information that pertains directly to the discussion at hand.

Now, had one of the magistrates declared at the beginning of the meeting that he was expecting an emergency call, then excused himself from the meeting to accept it when it came, that would be a different issue. I am a wife and the mother of two small children. I recognize the importance of being able to be reached by phone.

I also could accept a magistrate pulling up an email from a concerned constituent for reference during the meeting.

Even if the texting was innocent and personal, it's time that we moved to an increased level of transparency in local government matters. Events like I witnessed Monday must be done away with if the court desires to have the public's trust. If any elected officials, be it the judge executive, Taylorsville mayor, city commission members, magistrates or others, tap away at their cell phones during a public meeting, the public must question if something is being discussed in secret right before our eyes. Or perhaps the official is playing a game, rather than representing his constituents and paying attention to the meeting.

Regardless, unless it is an emergency, the use of any electronic handheld device really should be kept to a

Open meetings are for government business, period. Personal emergencies happen and should be dealt with, but if you're in a seat that came to you courtesy of the constituents of Spencer County, show them you care enough about your job to pay attention and put the phone down.

Thomas stands for conservative values

I'm writing this in support of Thomas Massie for United States Congress. While talking to Thomas, I saw he was for the things I was for. He is a true conservative, which means he is against abortion, ObamaCare, gun control and everything that is not right in the eyes of God.

While talking, I said there is two more questions I would like to ask you: 1) We are a small county. Are you going to recognize us the same as you do the big counties? His answer was, sure. I came from a small county, too. Lewis County is around 14,000 population. 2) Are you going to support Israel? He said Israel is our greatest ally in the Middle East.

He talked like there was no question about it, they had his support. I was so glad to hear this because Israel is God's chosen people and God told Abraham I will bless those who bless you and curse those who curse you.

As we look at what a great candidate we have in Thomas Massie, we see

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) is a serious condition that is common in people that have experienced traumatic events somewhere in their lifetime. People look at it as an incurable disease. What people do not know is that PTSD has been around since the time of the crusades and was not fully identified until soldiers from WWII were coming back having nightmares and changed by what they had seen. Some people said that these soldiers had their souls torn out. As a society we must be aware of PTSD and the effects it has on our sol-

PTSD is often misunderstood and the men and women that have it are labeled as mentally unstable or patients who are just making it up as they go to gain attention. But what people fail to understand is that there are signs all around us that prove PTSD is real. There are ways to identify this. Things to look for would be change of appetite, weight gain or loss, trouble with remembering things and concentrating, fatigue, lack of energy, sleeping too much or too little, feelings of guilt, worthlessness or helplessness, neglect of responsibility and appearance, withdrawal from families and friends. There are multiple ways to deal with PTSD, but the one that I have found that works the best is for veterans to spend time with family and friends. I say this because I have found that when I talk to veterans the thing that helps them get through combat is the thought of them returning to their loved ones. The downside to this is that most people don't know how to deal with a veteran who is suffering from PTSD and in some cases it has caused families to fall apart.

I have compiled a list of techniques that came from experts at the United States Department of Veterans Affairs and my own research. This list should help family members to aid their veterans in transitioning back from combat and hopefully prevent one more family from falling apart. The more you know the better you can

Before your solider returns home, learn as much as you can about the illness so that you are prepared. Try to get your solider to attend as many social events with family as possible. This will help them transition back from combat. This will help keep the PTSD from getting worse. Offer to go to doctor visits with your family member. You can help keep track of medicine and therapy, and you can be there for support. Tell your loved one you want to listen and that you also understand if he or she doesn't feel like talking. I cannot stress enough how important it is for us as a country to learn as much about this as we can. It is only going to become more common as the war in the Middle East comes to an end and more and more cases will begin to show up. Take just a few minutes a day to visit the Veterans Affairs website and see what all you need to do to help. This disease is not incurable, and it is up to us as a country to come together and help those affected so we can give back those men and women who have sacrificed their bodies, not only physically, but mentally, for America and its freedoms.

Fight budget cuts to keep technology

When the government goes to cut budgets, they go straight to education. Why do they look at education first? The result of this is going to affect our children's futures. Some schools cannot even afford to have textbooks, so how are they supposed to keep technology in the schools? Technology is important to education in all aspects. Technology helps with everything in a classroom. Not just computers, there are other things like projectors, smart boards and iPads/tablets that aid students during class. As parents, you should write to your congressmen about how we need to invest into our children.

There are several ways an iPad or tablet can help students succeed in school. According to Jeffry Thurana, there are more than seven different ways an iPad can help students excel in school. He says the most obvious way is replacing physical books altogether. The advantage of taking away the textbooks is that in the iPad, books are always going to be in perfect condition. Students can add notes and annotations without having to write it on a sticky note and put it into the book. The iPad also allows students to take text and audio notes. It also acts as a schedule and it allows them to put reminders in, and it sends notifications to their phones. It will remind them to do their homework or to print a paper that is due the next day.

Computers are the main technology used in most schools. Schools need computers to help engage their students in what they are teaching. Students without computers are like babies without bottles. Most students in the United States own computers and know how to use them. The advantage of the computer now is that it is easy to pull up any information needed. It also allows students to type all their papers and make any charts/graphs that they need. Budget cuts can take all this out of schools if you do not try to fight it.

Technology is the future. The statistics of how students in America rank against other countries is According OnlineEduction.net, student ranks are 25th in math and 21st in science. It also states that 1.2 million high-schoolers drop out every year, which is one student every 26 seconds. Technology can help kids stay in school; it can help them stay engaged while they are in the class-

The way it is now, most schools have computers. By the time young students are adults, every school is going to have computers in it. If students do not stay updated with the latest advancements, they are taking a risk. This world is advancing so fast it is hard to keep up with everything that is occurring. But by staying updated and having increased knowledge in the technology field, students are increasing their chances of getting a job.

Do not let the government push you around. Fight budget cuts and help your sons or daughters have a successful future. In the world today, there is no way students can survive without knowing how to use a computer. Encourage your child to know everything possible about these machines. It can only help them down the road when things get even more complicated than they are today. There is no reason not to speak out about this, let your congressmen know that you care about your children's future.

Curriculum should be more rigorous

Forty years ago, it would not have been uncommon for a young man or woman to walk into factory with little more than a diploma and walk out with a fulltime job. As the job market shifts into one of higher speed and efficiency, the value of that same diploma has greatly diminished in the eyes of the employer. High school graduates are quickly discovering the need for some sort of post-secondary education or train-

One may assume that, as the need for more rigorous training may come, more rigorous preparation may follow. There are only a few signs of such harmonious action in high school education today. One of which is the Core Forty, (requiring three science, three social studies, four math, and four science credits) but even such a nationally accepted program has had no real impact on standardized test scores. In fact, since 1978, ACT scores remain nearly stagnant. Scores remained stagnant because the classes some 34 years ago were just as in depth as the classes are today.

to challenge their students with real-world problems, written assessments and individual responses, their students would learn at an anomalous rate. Why would a teacher not create such plans? Fear. Students will go through an absolute culture shock. Those students will complain to their parents about how the class is too hard, and the parents complain to the administrators, who then have those teachers put "under review." Too much emphasis is placed on how many students a high school can graduate, as opposed to the quality of those students that are grad-Imagine that you were to

Bootleg items detrimental to economy

The word "bootlegging" typically brings to mind the illegal production and distribution of alcohol. However, the term can be applied to any item that is illegally produced, including merchandise. In the special event sales industry, bootlegging is an increasing problem that has detrimental effects on our economy. Merchandise bootlegging sometimes occurs at events such as concerts and sports events. It is harmful on many levels, including loss of money to the artist and venue, tax evasion, and the fact that customers are not always receiving a product that is worth what they paid.

Every counterfeit piece of merchandise that is purchased is a lost sale for the artist, the venue, and the vendors who are selling the official merchandise. Artists make much of their income from merchandise that they sell at their concerts, so these sales are crucial to them. Bootlegging merchandise is a form of stealing, because not only are these people taking sales away from artists, the designs and symbols used on the merchandise are sometimes trademarked, making the reproduction illegal.

The government is also at a loss because of the sales of bootleg merchandise, as taxes are not paid on these items. This is illegal, and also leaves less money for government-funded projects.

When a customer purchases bootleg merchandise, such as a t-shirt, they do not always receive the quality that they are paying for. In some cases, the items are of poor quality and do not look as good as the authorized merchandise. There is also an uncertainty as to where the money made off of bootleg merchandise goes, as it is not going to the artist. The vendors of this merchandise can use the money for whatever they like, including illegal activities.

It is always important to be sure of the authenticity of any merchandise before you purchase it at a concert or any other event. Bootleg merchandise is harmful to our economy and should be avoided at all costs.

Let the tears fall down

TODAY by JON ROHR Creek Baptist

One day when I was very young my parents promised me a day out. I don't remember if we had planned a picnic or a trip to the zoo, I just remember that it rained cats and dogs. And I also remember how heartbroken I was. It wasn't fair to my parents, they couldn't help the rain, but I was so disappointed.

That was probably the first time I really grieved. It was over something silly, but then again I was probably only 4 or 5 years old. In our lives, grief and sorrow become familiar companions. And grief is not just about death, it is about loss. Loss of a loved one, loss of hopes and dreams, loss of a cherished plan, we grieve over all kinds of loss.

Today someone is struggling with the loss of a beloved spouse or father. Someone else is grieving over a home lost to foreclosure. A young woman is grieving the loss of all the hopes and dreams of marriage as she signs the divorce papers. A family man is shattered with grief as he learns his job has been outsourced.

Some of our grief and sorrows are bitter pains that leave us breathless, some pass quickly, others never truly leave us. And every single one of us deals with loss and pain, with grief and sorrow. But we do not need to carry those burdens alone. Jesus promised "I am with you always, to the very end of the age." (Matthew 28:20) When we have faith in him, we have a comforter that never leaves us. We may feel alone, but in truth he walks with us through that dark valley.

Paul tells us that we should not "Grieve like the rest of men who have no hope." (1 Thessalonians 4:13) He is not telling us we don't grieve or shouldn't grieve, but that our grief is different. Our grief, our sorrow is temporary. We have a hope that surpasses our grief, a faith the overcomes the shadows that can surround us, we have a light that shines even in the darkest hours.

That hope, that light is Jesus. He is the one who walks with us, who helps us bear our burdens. He is the one who gives perspective to our pain. Allow him to give you comfort. Allow him to bring you hope. Let him light your path as you leave the darkness behind. And remember, our hope goes beyond what we can see; it rests in what he has promised. Trust in him and be set free!

Saving up those heavenly treasures

FROM WORD by C.L. GLASSCOCK

Lay Minister

Matthew 6:19-21 says, Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

In my life I have met and gotten to know many people who are rich, middle class and poor. I will have to say I have seen more poor people happier than rich or middle class. I have seen people rich and always wanting more; and middle class who God has blessed, and are not satisfied, always wanting more. I witnessed to a man who had millions of dollars and he started telling me how much good he did with his money. He had sent this girl to college and he had done all of these great things, even went to church but he never told me about Jesus being in his life. Regardless of how much we have on earth or what we have done, if we don't have Jesus in our heart we are as lost as the man who does everything wrong and lives for the Devil every day.

Now let's talk about our treasures in heaven. One very important question: Are you laying up your treasures in heaven or here on earth? Jesus tells us to lay up our treasures in heaven and where your treasure is there will your heart be also. Some think that regardless of what I do here, I have been saved and am going to heaven. If you make it to heaven are you going to tell Jesus, "I left my treasures on earth and you will have to send down there and get them?" What a joke. Everyone knows that will not work. I believe we need to take a look at what will happen to the things we leave on earth.

2 Peter 3:10-13 But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness looking for and hasting into the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we according to his promise look for new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

I think we all need to ask ourselves a question. If we knew this day was coming tomorrow, would we be trying to change our way of life and lay up treasures in heaven? If you don't know how to start laying up treasure in heaven, a good place to start is what Jesus says in Matthew 19:14.

But Jesus said, suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And may I suggest give to the children in need the best, like you give to Jesus.

ment would bring in an estimated profit of $160,000. With that rate, the city could still stand to lose between $55,000 and $60,000, Comptroller Randy McConnell estimated Thursday night.

A 3.5 percent increase would mean 35 cents more each month for city customers who pay the base rate (for up to 1,000 gallons).

County customers who pay the base rate would see an increase of 58 cents each month.

When the subject of the water rate increase came up, Commissioner Nation suggested that, based on public concern he has heard since news broke of a possible water rate increase, the city look at cutting back on expenses instead of raising water rates.

One area Nation suggested the city look at is that of employee health insurance.

Currently, health insurance is provided to city employees at no cost to them.

Many city employees attended Thursday's meeting.

"It's good to see all the employees here," Nation said. "I know you're concerned about health

Nation said health care is a local and a national issue.

"The cost of health care is continuing to rise," he said.

Nation suggested that if the city would look into cutting back in other areas or paying off some debt, it could continue to provide things (like health care at no cost to employees) for a little longer. Nation also questioned the monthly medical allowance the city provides to the mayor and commissioners.

"No cities that I can find did that," Nation said.

According to City Clerk Steve Biven, each of the five members of the commission get a monthly medical allowance of $450.

"They must turn in receipts ... in order to get reimbursed," Biven said. "That amount has remained constant since its inception long before I arrived."

That means a total of $27,000 is budgeted each year for that medical allowance, although if each member doesn't use the full amount, the full $27,000 might not be spent.

"We have an obligation to look at our expenses," Nation said. Because of these expenses, as well as others, Commissioner Ingram said she didn't see that the city had a choice but to pass on the entire 6.4 percent rate increase. McConnell estimated doing so and sewer budget with a profit of around $43,000.

would leave the combined water

"To continue to operate, and continue to pay 100 percent of insurance and overtime ... then we don't have a choice than to raise the water rate to the public the 6.4 percent," Ingram said.

"My job is to take care of the public, and it's to take care of the employees to a certain extent," Ingram continued. "But I don't know of any place that does that [pay 100 percent of insurance costs] any more."

With the outlook indicating future rate increases to the city Louisville Water, Commissioner Spears said she thought at least part of next year's cost increase would need to be passed along to customers.

"We can't not pass along any of it," she said. Mayor Pay said he wanted to do what was best for the city's employees, saying they "keep the engine of the city" running, but acknowledged the commission needed "to see how we can not go in the hole as much."

"Well, we could raise a little and cut a little," Nation said.

After a brief recess, Pay made a motion to approve a 3.5 percent rate increase for the city and the county customers.

> "What we have to do pretty soon is look at ways that we can reduce costs and save money," Pay Commissioner Waldridge seconded the motion and, as mentioned above, the increase passed by a vote of 3-2. The 3.5 percent increase will be included in the city's proposed budget, but any water rate increase has to be approved in ordinance form, which requires a first and second reading.

As of Friday afternoon, no special meetings were scheduled to discuss a water rate ordinance; however, the city's next regularly scheduled meeting will be Tuesday, June 5, at 5 p.m.

When she realized Bryce wasn't breathing, she turned to her training and tried the maneuver twice on the boy while her teaching partner called 911.

"The first couple of times, it didn't come up," so she turned him over and gave him a few blows to the back. Already, Bryce was going limp for lack of oxygen, she said.

After using the Heimlich on Bryce a second time, he finally threw up the mint and began breathing again, she said.

Thomas said she and Bryce both remained calm throughout the ordeal; afterward, however, they Tammy Cooper, who was called to pick her son up from school after the incident, said she "couldn't imagine what [Thomas] went through" having to use the Heimlich on Bryce.

"She remained calm and used [the training], and didn't give up when it took so long," Cooper said. Of that, she is grateful and glad that Thomas is getting recognition for what she's done.

"We can say 'thank you,' but still, that's not really enough," Cooper said.

Though Bryce was "weak and a little scared" by the time they got home, Cooper said, "after about three hours, he was back to his old

Today is Children's Mental Health Awareness Day by PHYLLIS McLAUGHLIN

Special to The Spencer Magnet

Is your sulking daughter being a normal teenager, or could her change in behavior be a warning sign for depression? Could your son's sudden bursts of anger be a passing phase, or is it a warning sign that he's being bullied at school?

In both scenarios, the answers could go either way, according to Stephany Pond, unit manager and master therapist at Seven Counties' Taylorsville office.

Often, parents and adults will write off such behavior as normal teenage angst. But, Pond says adults should remember that children can suffer mental disorders brought on by day-to-day stress, too.

"Our society is extremely stressful for us as adults. We are constantly being asked to do more and more, and get so little back in return. We worry about mortgages or retirement," she said. "All of our stresses are felt by our children, who also have their own stresses, too - higher expectations at school, peer pressure to fit in and even bullying. That's not even including the big things they deal with, like divorce, moving to a new place or a death."

That's why today, Wednesday, May 9, is Children's Mental Health Awareness Day nationally and locally. Spencer County Judge-Executive Bill Karrer signed a proclamation to bring attention to this issue here,

Case closed on EMS building violations

by SHANNON BROCK

Spencer Magnet Editor

Reports that the Spencer County Emergency Medical Services building was dilapidated, with rodent excrement and holes in the ceiling and floor, led to a change in leadership at EMS and a $3,500 fine from the Kentucky Labor Cabinet's Occupational Safety and Health Program.

According to documents obtained from the OSH program through open records requests, the office inspected the EMS building between the dates of Feb. 8 and March 21.

Following those inspections, several citations and notifications of penalty were issued on March 26.

The county was cited for one serious violation and another violation noted as "other" that included six items.

According to the serious violation, item 1a, "for the three paramedics and eleven emergency medical technicians of Spencer County Emergency Medical Services that have occupational exposure to blood and other potentially infectious materials while caring for patients on emergency medical runs, no written exposure control play [was] in place." According to item 1b, for those same employees, "no workplace-specific training was provided for exposure to blood and other potentially infections mate-

The county was instructed to abate that violation by April 5 and pay a $3,500 fine.

The following items were listed as "other" violations: •"The outdoor exit route must be reasonably straight and have smooth solid substantially level walkways." The back deck at the EMS building was "not secured and leaves an uneven walkway for exit from the building."

•"The building was not maintained to prevent the harborage of rodent sand no continuing and effective extermination program was in place for rodent control."

•"No medical records have been established or maintained." The inspection found that one paramedic suffered a needlestick when picking up a needle and one EMT suffered a needlestick from a used needle when clearing trash out from a run. No medical record for either needlestick had been established or maintained.

•Regarding the needlestick incidents above, no sharps injury log had been established or maintained.

•No written hazard communication program had been developed, implemented and maintained.

 Similarly, no hazard communication training had been provided.

None of the "other" violations came with a fine.

According to the case audit report provided in the case file obtained through a second open records request, the county's payment of $3,500 was received on April 16, and the case is listed as closed on that date.

According to a "Notification of Abatement of Apparent Violations" form, the county abated all of the violations by March 30.

No citations were issued as a result of holes in the floor in the building.

According to the narrative included in the case file, "as a result of the action taken to move the employees shortly after the appearance of holes that went completely through the floor, no citation [was] recommended for the presence of holes."

No citations were issued based on a complaint of possible mold in the building either.

The amount of mold colony

The amount of mold colony forming units found outdoors and indoors was similar, the narrative states.

"Since this is such a small amount of mold and the total colony forming units were not 10 percent higher indoors than outdoors, no citation or mold letter [was] recommended," the narrative reads.

Renita Murphy, volunteer coordinator for Spencer County's Parent to Parent support group, said that for many years, she knew her son had issues, but doctor after doctor told her that there was nothing wrong. Or they misdiagnosed what was happening and put him on unnecessary medications.

When he was 9, he was finally diagnosed with Asperger syndrome, a high-functioning form of autism.

All along, "I knew something was wrong. I was told I was overreacting," she said. "I felt I was the only person in the world with this weight on my shoulders."

Once the correct diagnosis was made, she was able to deal with her son's issues. She also found that there are many resources available to parents of children with mental disorders or illnesses, including the Parent to Parent group, where parents can meet others who have similar issues.

The support group meets the second Tuesday of each month, from September through May. Though the last meeting for this school year was yesterday, Murphy encourages any parent who needs assistance or support to find groups in neighboring counties and to reach out to resources such as Seven Counties.

Pond said children ages 13-18 can suffer from many mental disorders. In fact, she said, 21 percent of children in that age group experience a severe disorder, and the numbers are rising.

The key is to watch for changes in behavior, Pond said. "If your kid is happy-go-lucky and suddenly becomes withdrawn from you or isolates themselves, or their peer set changes suddenly, that's a warning sign."

Her advice is to get the child to talk to you, she said, adding that it's a good idea to get the child engaged in an activity when you decide it's time to talk. It could be taking a walk together or playing a game, but children are likely to talk more freely about their feelings when they have something else to focus on.

If listening and intervention doesn't work and the behavior is becoming more pervasive, it may be time to consult a physician or mental health professional for treatment, Pond said.

She also warns parents not to put off confronting these issues. "Earlier is better. Then it's a matter of just talking the problem out" rather than requiring extensive treatment and years of therapy, she said.

Both Pond and Murphy agree that parents should be prepared to seek professional help for their children, and that's what makes the national day of awareness important – because the majority of children who need these services aren't getting them.

Pond cites studies by the National Institute of Mental Health, which shows that among children 13-18: 9 percent have Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder; 14 percent have a mood disorder; and 25.1 percent have anxiety disorder.

For more information about local resources for parents who feel their child needs help, call Seven Counties at (502) 477-2577 or contact the Kentucky Partnership for Families and Children, which offers services for children age 5 and younger.

For more information about Parent to Parent, call Murphy at (502) 751-2503.

ment's previous headquarters on Industrial Drive that were deemed unfit living conditions for EMS personnel. Currently a new location has not been identified and Karrer said whether EMS will relocate or build a new building is still unknown. He did confirm after the meeting that the county was not interested in salvaging the old headquarters.

However, the expense of such a project has the possibility of affecting other services.

"We have an EMS building that we need to take care of," Karrer said. "To do that, with the dollars that I felt safe that we had to spend, meant that some of the programs that we might want, need or like to do, we couldn't spend the money on them just yet or put them in the budget."

Some of the line items identified as possibly being eliminated from the budget due to the EMS building expense were new cruisers for the Sheriff's department — a $55,000 line item — and the expense of outfitting those cruisers with emergency equipment.

"There is a possibility there is a grant for the new cruisers . . . but if we don't get new vehicles, there is not a need for the new emergency equipment," he said.

Another element Karrer said was affected because of the EMS project was the road fund. Karrer said he would have preferred to allocate $50,000 to each of the five districts for asphalt and road improvements, but was only able to allocate $35,000.

Karrer noted that the $225,000 identified for a new EMS location was an estimate.

"Is that enough money? Well, that's very much debatable," he told the court. "So far in what we've been looking around, we don't have any kind of formal estimates yet."

Another new proposed line item includ-at $28,600. Officials hope that bringing on someone to complete maintenance on the county's vehicles and equipment will over time save money.

ed a part-time fleet maintenance technician

The proposed budget included a 3 percent cost of living increase for most all county employees, including the judge executive, county clerk and sheriff. All three officials have the same salary in the proposed budget, set at $76,690.15. Karrer noted that there were no increases in the magistrates salaries and that the magistrates had agreed to not accept a cost of living increase. In the proposed budget, the magistrates salaries were set at $7,800 annually, with a $3,600 expense allowance.

According to the budget summary provided by Karrer, 71.03 percent of the total proposed budget is attributed to the general fund, which includes general government, protection to persons and property, general health and sanitation, social services, recreation and culture, tax anticipation notes, capital projects, general services, contingent appropriations and the employer's share of fringe benefits. The road fund accounts for 24.56 percent of the proposal, including roads, general services and road department employee fringe benefits. The other 4.41 percent of the budget is taken by services noted as "jail", including general government, protection to persons and property, general services and fringe benefits. Although Spencer County does not have a jail, it still has a jailer and must pay for transportation, housing and medical costs associated with Spencer County inmates being housed in facilities outside of the county.

The magistrates had little comment on the judge's proposed budget and the first reading passed unanimously. Changes can still be made to the document before its second reading and approval.

"It gets the process started," Karrer said of the first reading. "It's in the magistrates' hands now as to what they want to do."

to attend. During the forum, candidates will each answer the same questions in a timed setting. Questions were submitted by readers, then brought before the Chamber board of directors as well as the staff of The Spencer Magnet.

Two of the six questions will be drawn at random at the forum, so candidates should prepare to answer all of them because any one could be selected.

To add another element of spontaneity, those attending the forum, which is open to the public, are also asked to bring questions with them. These questions should be written down and handed in upon arrival at the forum. Again, the questions will be reviewed for duplicates, and a couple will be drawn at random during the forum and asked to participants.

Here are the top six questions:

pure HD5 propane

1. How would you accommodate the needs of citizens (many of whom work outside Spencer County) by providing more convenient service hours?

2. Since the position of county clerk requires supervision of employees, please describe your previous experience dealing with employees who weren't measuring up to job expectations (such as courtesy, quantity or quality of work, job knowledge, etc.) What skills did you utilize as their superior to improve performance?

3. Due to the mismanagement of public funds of the previous administration, do you think the clerk's office has lost the public trust? How do you propose to restore that trust and/or maintain it?

4. What do you propose to do to bring the office into the 21st century?

5. How do you plan to operate the county clerk's office within a budget set by Fiscal Court?

6. Recently, the current county clerk agreed to fee pool. If elected, would you favor fee pooling? If not, how would you go about reversing the process?

ANTHONY DAVIS STAR TREK

Anthony Davis's trek across basketball's universe continues. Maybe the super moon last week was a sign.

When Davis pens an autobiography one day, the joys of his late teens will have to read like fanciful and exaggerated fiction. A reader will be bound to conclude, "That many dreams-come-true in a year's time? C'mon, man! No way!"

Last week the ex-Kentucky star, who a year ago was a skinny kid in Chicago, was at Churchill Downs, a special guest at the 138th Kentucky Derby. At a little before the super moon rise, he draped the blanket of roses onto I'll Have Another. A day earlier, Davis was told he is one of 18 candidates invited to try out for the U.S. Olympics Team for the London Games in August.

America. I love this place!

INDIANA-KENTUCKY

Tom Crean's Hoosiers won't be playing in Rupp Arena next season. The popular border rivalry was suspended because Kentucky's John Calipari demanded it not be played on IU's campus.

Views from here ...

- We live in a peculiar time. A college coach informs his director of athletics the basketball team will not play at another school's campus and the AD does as he's told.
- In new era college hoop$ traditions, rivalries, fan-favorite series have given way to big money, big egos and win at whatever it costs. Calipari doesn't like the SEC Tournament; he won't take his team to Bloomington; a series with North Carolina won't be renewed.

A couple shots across Calipari's bow last week – one national writer said Cal was afraid of losing at Rupp Arena next winter to the presumed No. 1 ranked Indiana, which would end his three-year unbeaten run at Another said, "Calipari doesn't care what you care about."

- A poll by the Evansville Courier on UK-IU said 63 percent of fans agreed with Crean, the game should be played on cam-
- A more revealing number for me was the 7 percent of fans who voted to "let the series go. If UK and IU are good enough, they'll meet in the NCAA Tournament."
- Proving, when one door closes, another opens, an Indiana-Louisville game or series is a natural and could have as much or more star power to attract CBS Sports. Crean's team and Rick Pitino's are experienced and preseason rated in top three.
- What happens to Kentucky's vacated December date with Indiana? With North Carolina going off the schedule also, season ticketholders can probably expect some combination of visits from Fairleigh Dickinson, Southern Utah, Delaware, Presbyterian or another lightweight to sell out Rupp Arena.

Lady Bears chalk up two wins

The Spencer County Lady Bears took the field twice last week and both times came out the victors. On Wednesday, the girls hosted Anderson County claiming an 8-7 victory in extra innings. On Thursday, the Bears were again at home and took a 4-0 shutout win against Shelby County. The Lady Bears were to be back in action Monday when they travel to Marion County and on Tuesday at Dupont Manual. This weekend they are scheduled for a tournament in Jeffersontown and on Monday, they will host Henry County.

Sports talk: The good, bad and ugly

The Derby's over, and a long summer awaits. But there's plenty of sports talk and chatter for fans. Some news is good, some is bad, but there's always something for sports fans to discuss, argue and gripe about. I'm no different.

THUMBS UP: Word is that Spencer County High School senior Ros Goodwin and Trey Wyatt, a senior from last year's Bears' squad, were to sign to play basketball at Kentucky Christian University next season. That's great news for both guys who have a chance to play at the next level and get a college education. Good luck to both!

THUMBS DOWN: The rush to link the tragic suicide of football great Junior Seau automatically with footballrelated brain injuries is premature. No doubt football is a dangerous sport and those at the college and professional level need to address the rash of concussions and increasing violent collisions, but speculation that the game killed this man began before his body was loaded onto a gurney. Let's wait seriously and has imposed serious fines, suspensions and other penalties against those involved in a bounty program, whereby members of the New Orleans Saints could earn bonus money by seriously injuring opposing players. It's a good sign that the league realizes that further scrutiny about the safety of the sport must be answered with significant efforts to protect the players.

THUMBS DOWN: For the better part of a decade, Albert Pujols was arguably the most complete hitter in the major leagues. He was a legend in St. Louis, already having won two World Series rings. However, bigger money came calling and Pujols left the Midwest for the bright lights of Los Angeles to play for the Angels. However, Pujols certainly isn't lighting it up out west. He's hitting under

.200 for the season with only one home run. What price can be put on contentment?

THUMBS UP: Somebody other than the Red Sox and Yankees were on national television Sunday night. I know Boston and New York are huge media markets, but no sport does a worse job of spreading the love to other teams like Major League Baseball. ESPN, FOX and others who select bigleague games to air but really should look toward the future and realize they play the game in other cities too.

THUMBS DOWN: Every season since 1969-70, Kentucky and Indiana have met on the basketball court. It's truly one of the great rivalries in all of sports, especially given the importance of basketball in those two states.

That rivalry ends this year, thanks to UK's insistence to no longer have it an on-campus game. This year, the game would have pitted the Hoosiers, preseason No. 1, against the defending national champions in Rupp Arena. Who wouldn't love such a game? Apparently Kentucky Coach John Calipari.

The coach/king went to his website to spew some propaganda to the blind UK followers about why UK needs to be non-traditional in scheduling

"It's time we learn and come to grips with the fact that we are not a traditional program," said Cal. Not sure what that means, except to say that traditionally, college programs have recruited kids, built them up for four seasons, and played other teams who did the same. In his scheduling manifesto posted on his site, he seems to suggest that recent success warrants UK the right to set and play by its own rules. And to think some people have been turned off by UK because they think Big Blue Nation is elitist? He further defends watering down the schedule based on the fact that his perpetually young teams will not be up to the task of facing more seasoned teams so early in their college careers.

"This is a players-first program and you cannot put a young team into situations that is not fair to the players," wrote Cal. Skeptics will translate that into a veiled admission that Cal is backing out of playing toptier opposition because his fresh-out-of-high school

Boundaries, part 1: Children need healthy limits

COUNSELOR'S CORNER

by DR. JOHN LAPP Professional Clinical Counselor

Much of what you are going to be reading today will be attributed to the books authored by two wonderful psychologists, namely Dr. Henry Cloud and Dr. John Townsend, who captured the theme of boundaries when the book "Boundaries" was published in 1992. Reportedly, millions of people have either purchased one of the many volumes and/or attended one of the live seminars related to this topic, "Boundaries with Kids" will be where much of the material is drawn from, although I will include examples of some of the families who came to me for counseling, relative to this subject, especially when one or more of their children appeared to not have had sufficient boundaries established in their lives, and the problems that had obviously developed.

Let's begin by establishing what the word actually means as it relates to the raising of children. We all know that where we live, there are boundaries that define the property lines. We also know that where we work there are expectations about hours, work required, established level of payment, dress code, etc. Those who are married know that there are definite boundaries of expected behavior in order to establish and maintain the quality and longevity of the relationship, and we also know the results of going outside those boundaries. The same knowledge should be established and maintained between parents and their children. So let's begin!

When given the responsibility to raise children to adulthood, it was undertaken with more than the provision of food, clothes, an education and, of course, their health and safety. In fact, as we neared the end of the course of raising them, we had hoped that we had also helped build their character with the knowledge of right/wrong and the positive and/or negative effects in place as they now were able to guide themselves. Hopefully, they recognized some spiritual values that we also had helped form in this character development. The facts are if a person's character makeup determines his or her future, the child rearing is primarily about helping the child to develop character that will take them through life safely, securely, productively and joyfully. It is vitally important to not just see the present, without recognizing that the future is actually now. That is precisely why it is necessary for

It is vitally important to not just see the present, without recognizing that the future is actually now. That is precisely why it is necessary for parents to adequately establish boundaries beginning as soon as you become a parent.

> parents to adequately establish boundaries beginning as soon as you become a parent. This should continue through the child's infancy years and on into the day that they are ready to be launched from under instruction and control of

> So, how does a parent learn how to live out the basic principles of boundaries with their children? We'll, hopefully, in this week's column, the instruction will give a start to the necessary teaching tools that parents can use to adequately perform this difficult but necessary task. Part of the problem will be how to enforce the boundaries in healthy and appropriate ways. It is vitally important and must be stated that children are not born with boundaries, so if they are to have them, they must be taught by those who love them, namely the parents.

> I have been practicing for more than 40 years, beginning my career as a school psychologist in the public school system, the private Christian school system and then in private practice as a marriage and family therapist. This has provided me ample opportunity to address the importance of parents taking their responsibility seriously, in spite of the nature and behavior of the children. A rule of thumb is if the child chooses to do well, things will, no doubt go well, and, if the child chooses poorly, he or she will suffer as a result.

I have witnessed thousands of adults who were raised in a very permissive environment with few, if any, rules/boundaries, and this can also affect how well the parent is able to enforce the necessary boundaries. Therefore, what will be presented will not necessarily be "problem centered" but "principle centered" which is, by the way, the central theme of the books authored by Cloud and Townsend. I will also present a concept which has been a great help to hundreds of parents and their children since I have first presented it in the 80s. It presents the concept of freedom and begins by telling the child, "I want to establish more freedom for you. Is that ok with you?"

I become a good friend of the child, but then when I explain what he/she must do to expand the level of freedom, happiness seems to disappear, although the end result of their efforts seems to have been worth it all.

Actually, the following column which will be presented next week will also present the importance of children eventually developing a sufficient level of responsibility to internalize the concept of, "My feelings are my problem," or "My attitude is my problem." The development of those concepts eventually leads to the development of a responsible adult.

Seniors need to be Savvy about doctors' appointments

Dear Savvy Senior,

Can you write a column educating patients on how to prepare for doctors' appointments? I manage a number of small health clinics, and have found that patients especially seniors - that come prepared when they visit our doctors are much more satisfied with the care they receive. Thanks for your help.

Patient Educator

Dear Educator, You're right. Studies have shown that patients who help their doctors by providing important health information and preparing themselves for appointments tend to get better care than patients who don't. Here are some simple things we can all do to help maximize our next visit to the doctor.

Before Your Appointment

Gathering your health information and getting organized before your appointment are the key steps to ensuring a productive meeting with your doctor. This is especially important if you're seeing multiple doctors or are meeting with a new physician for the first time. Specifically, you need

Get your test results: Make sure the doctor you're seeing has copies of your latest X-ray, MRI or any other test or lab results, including reports from other doctors that you've seen. In most cases, you'll need to do the leg work yourself which may only require a phone call to your previous doctor asking them to send it, or you may need to go pick it up and take it your-

List your medications: Make a list of all the medications you're taking (prescription drugs, over-thecounter medications, vitamins, minerals and herbal supplements) along with the dosages and take it with you to your appointment. Or, just gather up all you pill bottles and put them in a bag and bring them with you.

Gather your health history: Your doctor also needs to know about any previous hospitalizations, as well as any current or past medical problems, even if they are not the reason you are going to the doctor this time. Genetics matter too, so having your family's health history can be helpful. The U.S. Surgeon General offers a free web-based tool called "My Family Health Portrait" (see familyhistory.hhs.gov) that can help you put one

Prepare a list of questions: Make a written list of the top three or four issues you want to discuss with your doctor. Since most appointments last between 10 and 15 minutes, this can help you stay on track and ensure you address your most pressing concerns first. If you're in for a diagnostic visit, you should prepare a detailed description of your

During Your Appointment

The best advice when you meet with your doctor is to speak up. Don't wait to be asked. Be direct, honest and as specific as possible when recounting your symptoms or expressing your concerns. Many patients are reluctant or embarrassed to talk about their symptoms, which makes the doctor's job a lot harder to do. It's also a good idea to bringing along a family member or friend to your appointment. They can help you ask questions, listen to what the doctor is telling you and give you support.

Also consider taking some notes or ask the doctor if you can record the session for later review. If you don't understand what the doctor is telling you, ask him or her to explain it in simple terms so you can understand. And if you run out of time and don't get your questions answered, ask if you can follow up by phone or email, make another appointment, or seek help from the doctor's nurse.

Savvy tip: The National Institute on Aging offers a booklet called "Talking With Your Doctor: A Guide for Older People" that provides great information including a variety of questions to ask that can help you be a more informed patient. To get a free copy mailed to you, call 800-222-2225 or visit www. nia.nih.gov.

Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior. org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC "Today" show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.

Brown pitches no-hitter in '62; Ruritan Club in need of funds in '82

50 years ago May 10, 1962

Harvey Brown, senior baseball pitcher this year for Taylorsville High School, pitched a no-hit game here Thursday.

Harvey baffled Mt. Washington with his fast ball and variations of curves. He didn't allow a ball to be hit to the outfield in the 8 to 1 victory for Taylorsville. Mt. Washington's run scored on an error by the second baseman, a stolen base and an error by the first baseman.

Harvey's no-hitter was not an accident as this was the third game he has held the opposition hitless, going into the last inning this Shoddy team support kept him from getting no-hitters on two other occasions this year.

In his masterpiece against Mt. Washington, he struck out 13 men. High School games go only seven innings, so this in itself is quite an accomplishment.

"We think he is one of the better high school pitchers in the state and many other coaches in this area are of the same contention," Coach Mullins said.

Harvey is also a tremendous hitter and has hit .450 or better in the two seasons previous to this one. He is also a power hitter.

Harvey is a wonderful boy and follows instructions well. His ambition is to play professional baseball and we wish him success. A couple of professional teams have already shown interest in him.

If you are home-bound (only leave for a visit to the doctor), call 477-6640 and we will process your application by phone.

Note: Darlene will be over the center instead of the office. If anyone needs any additional information, before Friday, call Darlene in the office at 477-8296.

We, the Ruritan Club, are "strapped, cleaned out, broke." So come eat fish with us Saturday, May 22 at the Community Center. Maybe the profits will enable us to pay commission stand fee for the county fair, get ready for softball season, pay awards for the seniors, etc.

I note in the old home town paper, the Linton Lodge is charging $4.00 per plate, our price is only $3.00. The horse pullers, who come to our fair, tell us we have the best fish money can buy. Well, it is not only the fish, it is the way they are fried. Come try them, starts at 11 a.m.

City workers are a bit puzzled at why a new water tank built just south of Elk Creek near Hillsborough won't fill during the night, but engineers remain optimistic. The new tank, which will fill to almost half full, has already increased water pressure in the area, according to Taylorsville Water Superintendent Dan Crowe, but it's still a mystery as to why the tank doesn't fill during the night while others tanks on the system do.

Keith Sears, of PEH Engineers of Louisville, told the Taylorsville Commission May 5 that several "variables" still need to be worked out of the system before the problem can be solved but that the system is quite capable of filling the tank. The tanks (there are nine throughout the county) are filled by pumps during night for use during the day.

Florida: "They have everything. My thing was, do I have the confidence, right now, to be successful there? Standing up to the hype is the hardest thing about Kentucky."

Listed as a 6-10, 215-pound center, Cauley will have time to grow his game, practicing every day against shot blocker Nerlens Noel and grow up to handle pressures of playing in Rupp Arena. He looks destined for an Eloy Vargas role. Game relief for Noel.

BARNHART-IU

Statement issued by Director of Athletics Mitch Barnhart on the UK-IU stoppage last week was typically (weak) spin and wrap-in-the-

"We were contacted by Indiana ... (said) they were moving on for the 2012-13 season and would revisit continuing the series at a

"Our desire to play the series at a neutral site was due mainly to the success of the series from 1992-2006. It allowed the fans of both schools to enjoy the experience of one of the greatest rivalries every Peculiar, Barnhart had to search back six seasons to make his point?

Bottom line: Heading to 2012-13, (soaring) Kentucky nor (revivalist) Indiana needs the other.

Region rival replacement-fornow candidates for both are promising. For Kentucky, SEC newcomer Missouri and talked-about series with Kansas. For Indiana, Rick Pitino's Louisville Cardinals.

PARTING SHOT(S)

- Reader wrote: "Is John Calipari a legitimate candidate for the basketball Hall of Fame? He answered his own question: "... the only national pundit I hear talking about Cal being a potential HOF coach is (Dick) Vitale."
- Reader wrote: "If Kentucky fans had a single personality they most love to hate, who would it be? My vote would be Rick Pitino with Christian Laettner right behind. What say you?"

Answer: Bob Knight is Kentucky's longest running antagonist. Hall of Fame coach and competent national basketball analyst, he still has a pulpit. ESPN.

Knight's well documented resentment toward Kentucky keeps it interesting. But, it doesn't make him unique.

And so it goes.

recruits aren't ready to play big-time basketball. They need a few months to adjust.

So, Kentucky fans, instead of being treated to home games against powerhouses like North Carolina and Indiana, you'll get to pay premium bucks to watch the likes of Lamar, Rider and Sienna. Who cares that Kentucky fans have enjoyed the traditional rivalries - coach said UK is non-traditional and who dares argue with the great and powerful Cal?

"If eight guys leave and go in the first round, and we're not the type of team that can play a ridiculously hard schedule, then we shouldn't be locked into contracts we can't adjust," continued Calipari. Those are words written by a man who once boasted an "I'll play anyone, anywhere, anytime" attitude, but now suggests that he wants to cater his schedule around how good his team is. As a lifelong UK fan, I'm embarrassed to admit it – but that's cowardly.

But Cal is adamant about his "nontraditional approach," suggesting he's not playing to win games in the regular season, but preparing for the postseason.

"It's either we do that or we over-schedule and put our players at risk," he continued.

Risk of what - losing a regular season game or two? Instead, Cal puts UK at risk of losing all respect and integrity by padding the schedule.

Time from page B-3

The system is not hurt by the unfilled tank and water pressures won't be affected if the tank isn't full, Sears said, but "we're confident we can and will fill the tank."

In other business, the commission approved on the first reading to annex 2.507 acres of land owned by Kenneth Simms just north of Taylorsville on the west side of Ky. 155 between Brashears Creek and Taylorsville Foodland. A possible use for the land includes a drug store or other business.

In other business, the commission:

•tabled discussion on approving money for upgrading the police and sheriff's radios.

•discussed the cutting of a bothersome and potentially dangerous tree on Reasor Ave.

Students in Leianne Lewis' eighth-grade social studies classes have learned a little bit about stitching and pork barrels since they began their quilting project back in September. Now, as the school year winds to a close, the classes took a moment last Thursday to show the quilt off to parents and the community.

The quilt, which represents some branch of government - either the judicial, legislative or executive branch - in each of its 40 squares, will now be on display in the courthouse, where Spencer Judge-Executive David Jenkins said he hopes to have a plaque placed underneath the quilt.

On Thursday, before the classes presented the quilt to Jenkins, each student explained the meaning of his or her quilt piece.

Question: Is it okay to use perfumes on my dog between baths and how often should I wash my dog (Dachsund)?

Answer: Many allergic skin conditions can either be caused, or made worse, by the type of shampoo and accessory cosmetic products that are used on pets. As a rule dogs should not be bathed more than once monthly. Bathing more often, and depending on the products used, can alter your pets natural skin flora and the oil integrity which can lead to many skin troubles. Perfumes are usually not a great idea, though some dogs do not seem to have a problem with their use.

REAL ESTATE

with David Taylor - Realtor

Question: I have been looking at some older homes to purchase. Do I need to be concerned about any issues with lead based Answer: Any home that was built prior to 1978 has the potential to have lead based paint. Before you place an offer on a home, you should receive a lead based paint disclosure form completed by the seller. On this form, you should be given notice if there have been any past problems with lead paint or if there have been any tests performed in the past for lead paint. On the sales contract, there should be a provision that allows you to test for any lead hazards. You should also receive an information brochure from your realtor, "Protect Your Family From Lead in Your Home" put out by the EPA. Lead based paint has the potential to be a health hazard and you should use due diligence in getting all the facts before you purchase a home.

DENTIST

is this something new?

Answer: Our office has used the Diagnodent Laser system for over ten years with great success. The laser is the same power as the common "Pen/Highlighter" pointers so it is quite safe. The Diagnodent uses a computer to measure the penetration of the laser in your tooth and can tell the difference between stain and decay. It also displays a numerical record, so over a period of time, we can tell if a small cavity is getting deeper or remaining stable. With regular home Fluoride rinse use, we are even seeing some smaller cavities improving! The Diagnodent is a great tool and has an accuracy rate of over 90%. Several studies have shown this to be better than X-rays or the dreaded 'Poker". Though finding cavities requires the use of different methods, the Diagnodent has saved many of our patients from unnecessary treatment of "stains" and has also detected many larger "sneaky" cavities not easily found with other methods. If you have any questions about these medications or any dental questions, please call our office @502-477-5800 or e-mail us @ ransdelldentistry@hotmail.com.

State, local agencies bring 'defensive driving' course to Taylorsville

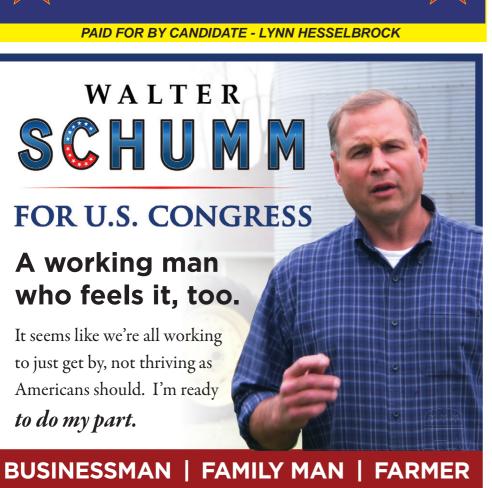

Several state and local agencies came together last Wednesday to provide a "Defensive Driving and Pursuit Decision Making" course to law enforcement officials. The course, taught by Spencer Countian Rob Miller, is sponsored by the Kentucky Association of Counties and the Kentucky League of Cities. 'We partner to provide training that is free to those we insure,' said Corey McIlvoy, with KACo. McIlvoy said the course addresses potentially hazardous situations that sheriffs' and police departments might encounter. Hosting the course in Spencer County was an idea of Miller and Sheriff Donald "Buddy" Stump.

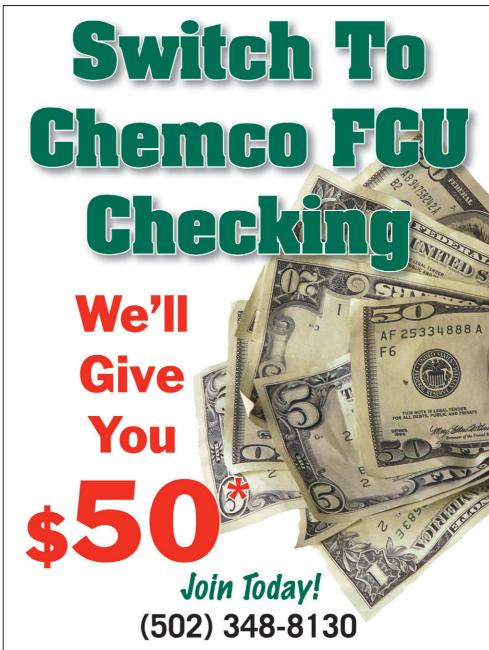

Attendees came from Hopkins, Marion, Bullitt and Spencer counties, as well as the cities of Taylorsville and Mount Washington. Miller said the course teaches law enforcement about the physics of an accident and helps its students be better prepared to make good decisions. Those taking the course learn to balance the need for apprehension of a subject, officer safety and public safety, Miller said.

ABOVE: Spencer Countian Rob Miller teaches a defensive driving class at the Spencer County Cooperative Extension building last Wednesday, with some of the state's finest deputies and officers as his students. Members of the Spencer County Sheriff's Department and the Taylorsville Police Department attended, but the course also attracted departments from as far away as Hopkins County. Here, Miller addresses interactions with the media at an accident scene where a law enforcement vehicle has been involved.

RIGHT: Rob Miller tells law enforcement officials from Hopkins, Marion, Bullitt and Spencer counties, as well as the cities of Mount Washington and Taylorsville, to take a minimum of 12 photos at an accident scene where a police vehicle is involved.
